

Pep Band Leaders for the past few years:

1938—Glenn Whitesel, Sigma Nu.

1939—Bill Chase, Phi Gamma Delta.

1940—Jack Fitzpatrick, Sigma Nu.

1941—Hud Nieman, Phi Gamma Delta.

1942—Jack Leishman, Sigma Nu.

The above list of the "kingpins of Idaho swing" seems vaguely familiar to Jason. A similar list showing how the editorship of the Gem "alternated" yearly between the Delts and Fijis was published earlier this year along with hints of a "closed corporation" between the two fraternities.

With the announcement recently that Jack Leishman had been picked to lead the Pep Band next year, Jason began to wonder about the musicians, too. Investigation into the annals of student history showed the facts. Perhaps its merely coincidental that for the past five years two fraternities have exercised a virtual monopoly on baton swingers.

Perhaps, but Jason wonders—especially when one of the ex-Pep Band leaders moved into one of the fraternity houses from a university cooperative only a few days before he was elected director. Coincidental? Well, you decide.

LET'S TIE UP

"Let's Tie Up With Schmidt" was chosen theme for next fall's Homecoming celebration for a dual purpose. Undoubtedly the largest drawing card on the program will be Coach Francis Schmidt. People are interested in seeing his flashy style of ball performed by Idaho men; they're interested in seeing a "big name" coach and interesting football. The outstanding characteristic of the genial Idaho mentor, the one that glares at everyone who sees his picture, is the black bow tie. Idahoans have become accustomed to associating a bow tie with Schmidt.

The committee chairmen wisely capitalized on the tie in choosing the theme, but the theme has deeper significance than just one man; it is a message to the whole state. "Let's Tie Up" signifies one of the many tangible aspects of the drive to solidify the state's future.

Architects Submit Blueprints Of ROTC Armory

Application for Building To Be Filed with Army Officials Immediately, Says Dale

Final blueprints for the proposed $200,000 university ROTC armory were submitted to President Harrison C. Dale yesterday by the Hummel-Tourtellotte company, Boise, architects.

"These are the plans by which the building will be constructed if our application goes through," President Dale said yesterday. "I feel certain that the project will be granted by the ninth corps area commander of the army."

President Dale announced that application for the building would be filed with armory officials immediately. He stated that the date when work would begin on the structure was uncertain.

Plan To Refinance Bond

"The refinancing of the bond issue on Memorial gymnasium to raise $100,000 of the $200,000 needed has not begun yet," President Dale stated, "but it will not be too hard to get that going when the time comes."

Col. D. B. Crafton, San Francisco, ninth corps area inspecting officer, who visited here last week, was shown preliminary plans for

Officer To Take Applications For Air Corps

Second. Lieut. R. D. Heinitch, McChord Field, Wash., arrived on the campus yesterday to take applications from students interested in becoming flying cadets with the United States Army Air Corps.

Lieutenant Heinitch will explain the latest plan for flying cadets, which calls for unification of classes of college men to carry them through their full course of training. This is the newest aim of the war department, pertaining to the air corps.

Units of 20

College units will comprise 20 men, and will be named after the institution from which the men come. The group will go through a seven and one-half month training
